United Church Notes

At the service in the Irma church last Sunday evening the pastor announced that he had received a supply of new labels for what have hitherto been called the Cent-a-Meal boxes, for gifts in support of Missionary work. There are three labels differently worded to select from, and they invite a gift per day instead of a gift per meal. The contents of the boxes now in the homes of friends will be collected during the next week or two and the new labels supplied according to choice.

The Trail Ranger Group held their last regular meeting for this season on Tuesday evening, the main business being the report concerning the sports day held last Saturday. Total receipts amounted to $21.72 and expenditures $13.89. Net profit $7.83. The boys were disappointed at their efforts, as the event was not well patronized. After providing for the payment of outstanding accounts, the total amount left in the treasury is $13.35, and approximately $10 of this amount will be used to give slight financial assistance to the boys who go to the summer camp. Art Knudson, Art Peterson and Phil Charter were appointed as a camp committee.

The Explorer group celebrated their closing meeting on Tuesday afternoon and evening by an outdoor picnic.

The aisles of the church are now provided with a cocoanut matting covering, a gift from the girls' and boys' groups. Hearty thanks are due to them for their kindly interest in the church, shown in this practical way.

The Ladies' Aid are holding a garden party at the residence of Mrs. A. E. Blakeley, south of town, on June 10th. Plan to spend your Wednesday holiday at this happy social gathering.

Services next Sunday: Albert 11 a.m., Alma Mater 3 p.m., Irma 8 p.m.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our most grateful and sincere thanks to everyone who has in every way helped us in our tragic loss through fire. And to those who have given so generously of clothing, food and furniture for our immediate needs, after the fire which robbed us of all the necessities of a home. And we especially thank the Coultman family who left no task undone that would lighten our burden and sorrow in the loss of our little Shirley in which they shared both time and expense, and sheltered and fed us at their home until such time as we could be established again. To Si Dalke who gave unstinted assistance; to Dr. Greenberg for his efforts with our baby; to Mr. Fletcher for his help; to Rev. Kemp for his consoling service; and for the floral offerings, and to everyone who helped. May God bless you all and keep you from such a harrowing experience as we have just passed through.

—The H. Jones family and
Mr. and Mrs. Joe Nephew.

Protection Of Wild Life

Not any too soon, an awakened interest in conservation of wild life and particularly game birds and animals, fur-bearing animals and fish is noted on both sides of the international boundary. This renaissance, if it can be called such, is most timely in view of the probable early extinction of many important and indeed valuable animals and birds if present wasteful methods are to be allowed to continue very much longer.

It is true that governments on both sides of the line have entered into agreements for the protection of some of the best known game birds and a good many regulations have been adopted by state and provincial governments for internal protection of a much wider range of both birds and animals of economic value to mankind, but that alone is not sufficient to ensure perpetuation of a great heritage.

True conservation cannot be attained until the great majority of the farmers in the country and sportsmen in the cities, towns and villages constitute themselves unofficial game guardians and use their utmost endeavors to protect harmless wild life both by example and precept.

Many thousands of men in the prairie provinces are already doing this, but maximum results cannot be achieved until practically everybody is imbued with the necessity of conserving one of the greatest gifts of Nature to humanity.

Both in the United States and Canada lovers of the great outdoors have become thoroughly alarmed at the decimation which has taken place in recent years in the flocks of game birds, both those that inhabit the uplands and those which migrate twice a year from the one country to the other. A similar apprehension at the rapid diminution of herds and flocks of wild game animals is being frequently voiced, and not without justification, in magazines and newspaper articles both north and south of the 49th parallel.

In the United States, where misplaced governmental activities have resulted in large scale destruction of breeding grounds and natural sanctuaries under the name of rehabilitation, sportsmen and conservationists are mooting the advisability of linking up all societies interested in the preservation of wild life in protest to the Federal government and to demand more rigid regulations and restrictions in the interest of fur, feather and hide, not alone for economic reasons but also from the viewpoint of the necessity for preserving the aesthetic features of the countryside.

It is good to note that this awakening desire to conserve the game birds and animals is being extended to include the song birds, for their importance in the balance of Nature is becoming more and more recognized. There was a time when the destruction of song birds was passed over as a matter of little or no moment, except by a few bird lovers.

This apathy towards the wilful destruction of the feathered songsters of woodland and open prairie is fortunately passing and to-day they are generally regarded as friends of man which should be protected. The majority of them it is now more widely recognized are the foes of insect pests which, if left to multiply without let or hindrance, would in a very short space of time render the world uninhabitable.

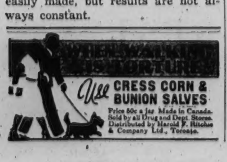

To-day not only are people generally refraining from killing song birds and are restraining youth from giving vent to a lust to kill, but are taking more active steps to protect their feathered friends from such natural foes as the crow and the magpie.

In all three provinces there are clubs in operation, formed with the destruction of the crow as the objective of the membership. While differences of opinion as to the menace of the crow have been voiced from time to time, the weight of evidence in the indictment of this bird as an adversary of the insectivorous song birds is overwhelming. One witness for the prosecution, Dr. H. G. Carson of Saskatoon found that 53 per cent. of the crow nestlings examined by him on behalf of the Fish and Game League last year had been fed eggs or young birds taken from their nests and that examination of more than 300 crows shot during the season by members of the league showed that 28 per cent. of the adult crows had eaten birds or eggs in the height of the nesting season.

In the light of this evidence the recently announced sweepstakes competition by the Saskatchewan Government aimed at the destruction of crows and magpies is regarded as a distinct forward movement in the program of preservation of songsters and game birds, and apart from the monetary reward offered for killing banded crows will doubtless be heralded with general approval by Nature lovers.

Crossing Wheat With Rye

Experiments in crossing Chinese wheat and rye to obtain a plant combining hardness of rye and milling qualities of wheat are being conducted by the University of Saskatchewan. Plants obtained from the crossing process are claimed to retain some of the qualities of rye. The cross between the two grains is easily made, but results are not always constant.

Maybe That Kind

An English motorist who owns one of those small cars which everybody makes jokes about was recounting an experience to a friend.

"I had a bit of bad luck coming up from Brighton the other day," he said. "I ran into a trap."

"Is that so?" said his friend. "Any cheese in it?"

Mining In Northern Area

Large Development Program For Northwest Territories This Year

As a result of the geological field program carried out by the Department of Mines last year, great activity in prospecting and mining development will be seen in the Northwest Territories during 1936. The Mining Recorders of the Department of the Interior at Cameron Bay, on Great Bear Lake, and Fort Smith, which lies just north of the Alberta-Northwest Territories boundary, report that while development work has continued on the older or main properties, preparations are being made by numerous interests for the carrying out of an extensive prospecting program this summer.

Prospecting activities will be chiefly centred in the Yellowknife area, also on the north and south shores of the east arm of Great Slave Lake including the islands. At least five major mining companies will have prospecting parties in this field and indications are that many individual parties will also prospect the area. As part of last year's geological field program 10,000 square miles were examined north of the northwest and east arms of Great Slave Lake, and the geological formation of approximately one-third of this area, which forms the southern part of the yellowknife Game Preserve, was found to be favourable prospecting ground for precious metals.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Prefers Life In Alberta

93-Year-Old Woman Does Not Like California

Although Mrs. H. M. Olsen is 93 years old, she would rather live on her wheat farm near High River in Alberta, operated by one of her sons, than live in the fruit-growing lands of Arizona where she once resided, or with her two sons now living in California.

"Grandma" Olsen showed little patience for people living in fruitlands. "What is fruit?" she asked. "It comes and goes, it doesn't last. "It is wheat that is lasting. Wheat —bread to feed the world. I have always been glad I came to Alberta. It grows wheat."

Mrs. Olsen left her native Denmark in 1858, crossed to Salt Lake City immediately after her arrival in New York, and soon after was married to Mr. Olsen. She came to Alberta in 1905.

"I walked every step of the 1,100 miles between Omaha, Nebraska, and Salt Lake City behind a covered wagon," she declared.

Record Of American Cow Something To Marvel At

Honor is being paid to an American cow which has produced 38,606 pounds of milk containing 1,402 pounds of butterfat in one year. Figures have been compiled to show that this is equal to the milk consumption of more than 200 people in one day every day of the year, enough milk and cream to make 88,880 ice cream cones, and enough butter for eight families every day, provided they are not on relief rations.

Very interesting. This record will be cited as a mark for other cows to shoot at; the sort of cows that every dairy farmer should aspire to have in his herd. Nineteen tons of milk containing more than 3.6 per cent. butterfat! We call it cow-operation!—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Many Tourists Expected

Peak Of 1929 Looked For By Travel Bureau

Tourist travel into Canada this year would reach the peak established in 1929, D. Leo Dolan, director of the Canadian Travel Bureau, predicted at Ottawa in an address at a banquet of the northern division of the Ancient Mystic Order of Samaritans. "To date we have received practically twice as many inquiries as we had at this time last year," he said. "Most of the inquiries are from United States citizens wishing to visit our country."

New Lifeboat Invented

Can Be Sealed And Has Device For Renewing Air Supply

Victims of future marine catastrophes will find themselves comfortably saved within a sealed, non-sinkable lifeboat, if the invention of a reputable Catalan engineer proves practical.

The new lifeboat that cannot sink is capable of seating 40 to 50 persons. It can be launched from a sinking ship under all weather conditions and in less time than that required to remove the canvas from an ordinary lifeboat.

The inventor is Cosme Salomo Vila, the engineer who originated lifesaving buoys for occupants of submarines. This invention was demonstrated in Madrid before a group of experts, including officials of the Spanish ministry of marine. It is said that naval experts consider adopting the submarine buoy as part of the general equipment of submarines.

Salomo Vila's latest invention, the non-sinkable lifeboat, is a launch 25 to 30 feet in length and capable of being closed so perfectly that neither air nor water can enter. The lifeboat is equipped with a motor and a special device for renewing the supply of fresh air.

The machinery for lowering the lifeboat after it has been occupied has been perfected by the same inventor. According to Salomo Vila and to witnesses who have seen tests made off the coast and near the town of Mataro, the lifeboat can be lowered in all kinds of weather and it is absolutely non-sinkable. These reports add that the interior of the vessel remained perfectly dry during violent storms and that the air was renewed without admitting any water.

Tribute To Famous Poem

English Earl Showed His Appreciation Of Spenser's Work

When Spenser had completed his most famous poem, "Faerie Queene," he took it to the Earl of Southampton, great patron of the poets of that day. The Earl received the manuscript, read a few pages, and then ordered a servant to deliver £20 to be the waiting author.

Reading on, he cried in rapture, "Carry the man another £20."

Proceeding still further into the fascinating work, he ordered still another £20 be delivered.

But at length he lost all patience and exclaimed: "Go turn that fellow out of the house. If I read further I shall be ruined!"—Christian Science Monitor.

Thieves Return Stolen Goods

To Keep Police Of Roumanian Town From Losing Jobs

The threat of the Roumanian government to fire the whole police force of the town of Buzau, Roumania, for incapacity broke the hearts of a dangerous gang of burglars. They sent by post to the chief of police a big parcel with stolen goods, accompanied by a letter stating that "We, the thieves of Bazau, do not want the poor police to lose their jobs and shall consequently transfer our activities to other parts of the country. Our principle is 'live and let live'."

The complaint of a member of parliament, M. Moceanu, whose elegant fur coat was stolen in Buzau, caused the ministry of interior to announce that if the coat was not found within 24 hours, the whole police force, including the chief, would be dismissed. Next morning, a huge parcel containing among other things, the fur coat of the member of parliament arrived at police headquarters.

Work has begun at Friedrichshaven on another Zeppelin—bigger and faster than the Hindenburg, which flew across the South Atlantic with 50 passengers and a crew of 40. The new Zeppelin will be almost as long as the ocean liner Queen Mary, will carry 80 passengers, and will average nearly 100 m.p.h. on long journeys.

FLEMING'S FOLLY

— BY —

LAWRENCE A. KEATING

SYNOPSIS

The story opens with Link Fleming addressing a meeting of Boone County cattlemen, called together with the object of forming an irrigation company.

The meeting terminates, but Buzz Hamilton and his sister, Helen, Link and Kilgo stay behind and Helen asks Fleming questions about his irrigation plan. This angers Buzz, who accuses Fleming of trying to influence his sister and, as he asserts, ruin his "spread". Buzz shoots at Fleming in an uncontrollable fit of anger, but Buster Townsend, Link's foreman, is shot in the stomach, and Fleming is uninjured. Buzz is arrested and sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Buzz Hamilton arrives back in Rawhide while Fleming and Helen are in the bank getting a loan for payment of wages for work on the dam. Roper Kilgo and Jackpot Mell meet him and he goes into the saloon with them. By the time his sister and Link come from the bank, Buzz has had several drinks. Roper has distorted the facts concerning the dam proposal to Buzz, making it appear that Link was trying to ruin him. Buzz, inflamed with liquor and anger, tries to throttle Fleming, but is thrown to the floor. Then Helen appears and tells Fleming she has been robbed of the $800 they had obtained from the bank.

On their arrival home they were met by a couple of Link's workmen, who told Fleming that there was a strike at the dam, and that the men were afraid they would not get their wages. Link told them of the robbery and promised them their money as soon as possible. The men reluctantly returned to work.

Fleming finds Roper and Jackpot Mell making trouble among his workmen, and orders them off his place at the point of his gun. Both Jackpot and Roper swear revenge, Mell telling Fleming to carry his gun with him, as Mell would shoot him the next time they met.

Buzz Hamilton goes to Fleming and asks that power of attorney be given him to manage the Triple H. He argues that responsibility would be the best way to help him to get back his self-respect and social standing. Link, sensing this was Roper Kilgo's suggestion, refuses, and tells Buzz his sister's rights are protected, and that if one dies the other party to the dam agreement gets the whole of the property. Hamilton then snatches Fleming's gun from its holster and tries to shoot him. Link knocks him senseless, helps Buzz to recover, and then leaves him.

Later, as he was riding towards the dam, Fleming is shot at by a couple of riders, whom he recognizes as Kilgo and Buzz. Then he goes towards the dam. He hears a series of small explosions. He hurries to the dam to find there has been a land slide and two of his workmen are injured.

(Now Go On With The Story)

"Anybody been talking to the men so's to get 'em dissatisfied?"

Townsend's glance was sharp. "A gent named Ferguson, the guy yuh just fired. Been brewin' trouble ever since he's worked here. Say, I followed him just now and I—Wal," he added with pride, "my nickname's Buster. Wait'll yuh see Ferguson." The foreman chuckled and whacked his thigh. "Yuh'll know I earned my handle that time!"

CHAPTER XV.

Link tossed reins over his mustang's ears and went to the front door of the Triple H ranch house. There was no answer to his knock, and with the easy familiarity of the west he opened the door and looked within. No one was there. He then walked around the side of the clapboard structure to the rear, thinking to learn from Ah Wee, the Chink cook, the whereabouts of his mistress.

Of a sudden he came upon her, and his pulse slowed, then beat faster than before. Rising from a kitchen chair which she had brought outdoors to sit in brilliant sunshine, was Helen Hamilton, her lustrous hair tumbled over her shoulders to form an alluring background for her finely chiselled features. She had in her hands a book which she had been reading, and now, at sight of him, showed surprise.

"Oh—hello, Link."

If her welcome lacked its usual warmth he did not notice as he took in the loveliness of her, the rose petal texture of her complexion, the large eyes and the glinting halo of wavy hair. He moved nearer to take her small hands while his eyes roved again over her head and shoulders. "Say, this is pretty hard on a young fellow. Maybe you know that already, eh?"

She looked away as if ill at ease. "It's nice of you to say that."

Fleming had utterly forgotten his errand; he could think of nothing but the vision of beauty before him. His sun-darkened face betrayed a slight flush as he leaned downward with hope high in his face. But her small hands pushed against his chest as she sought to free herself. Quickly abashed, he released her, and they stood silent a moment, avoiding each other's eyes.

"Gosh, I'm sorry. Reckon I ought-n't to've done that."

Still she said nothing. "You look kind of pale. You aren't ill, Helen?"

"N-no. Please tell me what you came for."

He flashed a puzzled look. "It isn't very good news, I'm afraid. You see, somebody caused a land-slide at the dam. It didn't kill anyone, but Orliss and Dooley got badly hurt and I had 'em sent to my ranch house. I guess it didn t do as much damage as was expected, but it did enough," he declared grimly, and launched into an account of the affair, deciding not to mention Buzz and Kilgo's attempt on his life.

Helen looked grave. "I'm awfully sorry. No doubt it was well to get rid of Ferguson if he caused all the trouble. Do you think he started the landslide?"

"Somebody put Ferguson up to makin' trouble, and whoever it was prob'ly did it himself."

"I see." She looked away. "Was there anything else you wanted to tell me?"

Link felt strangely disturbed at her coolness. He looked about for a place to seat himself. Helen rested again in the kitchen chair and he settled his tall muscular frame on the low step of the cook house doorway at her feet. He hated telling her, but it had to be done. "Buzz came over to see me this mornin'."

She glanced at him in surprise. "I didn't know that."

"You didn't? That's queer. Buzz said he'd talked it over with you, and you sent him to ask me—because he's paroled to me, I thought."

Helen leaned forward. "What do you mean?"

He saw that she did not follow, that she had no knowledge of Buzz's errand.

"Your brother came to my spread this morning to say he thought he could make a man of himself if he had responsibility. He wanted me to put in a word so's you'd sign over power of attorney for your ranch—put him in charge like he was before. Buzz went on that it was a man's job, and that if he didn't have a chance, how could he prove himself reformed?"

Helen gave a little toss of her head that sent the glinting mass of hair back over her shoulders. "He said that? Of course, there is a great deal in it. Now that I think," she recalled, and rested her chin in the palm of one hand, "he did mention something of the kind, but we didn't really discuss it. Of course when he receives a full pardon from the Governor I'll turn over his half of the spread, and perhaps give him charge of my part too."

"But that's different than the way things are now," Fleming said dryly. He proceeded to recount his interview with Buzz, step by step as it had happened. When he reached the point where both men had become heated, he began to feel uncomfortable for the troubled surprise that showed on her oval face. But he forced himself to go on, even to mention of the struggle.

When he ended Helen made no comment for a full minute. Then a look of pain waved over her countenance and the Tripule H mistress leaned back in her chair to regard him thoughtfully.

"Why did you knock him down, Link?"

He flashed an astonished look. "Why, he grabbed my gun! He would've shot me, maybe killed me, sure as I'm sittin' here!"

She frowned down at her hands. "I'm afraid I'll have to hear Buzz's side. Strange," she added. "He has been here since that occurred but he didn't mention it."

"You mean you think I'm lying?"

"No, I wouldn't say that. But—oh, I can't blame Buzz for being angry. You didn't handle the situation very well," she reproached. "Instead of winning his confidence when he came to give it, you refused to be sympathetic. It made him feel more than ever like a failure, a convict. Suppose you were in his place: how would you feel with everyone refusing to trust you, unwilling to help you make yourself a man?"

He simply stared at her from under brows knotted in astonishment. Finally he looked away and kicked absently at a stick. How could she feel thus on the facts stated? How could she blame him?

"Roper Kilgo put Buzz up to that—I found it out," he declared, looking straight into her wideset eyes. "He's convinced Buzz that I'm after yore spread, that I've got something crooked up my sleeve to freeze you out of the dam. I told Buzz about our partnership agreement, and that's when he went for my gun.

"But, pshaw, Helen, you don't put any stock in that kind of talk, do you? Kilgo was against irrigation and thought he headed it off at the meeting when Torney said it was no good. Now he begins to see the scheme will work. That water will make our spreads the most valuable in the county instead of his, and that rubs Roper the wrong way. Don't take much brain power to see he's behind the trouble we're having with the men. He was waiting for Buzz when we got through our talk, and I saw the pair of 'em—"

"Don't, Link—don't go on like that. You have no proof. It doesn't help to—to talk wildly and accuse Roper of everything that goes wrong. Especially when I know better."

He started, sucking breath sharply. "What do you mean?"

Her chin quivered slightly and her face seemed to go a shade paler. She avoided his eyes, to stare down at her tapering fingers. At last Helen assumed a determined expression and lifted her gaze to meet his.

"Link, I've about decided to accept a loan Roper offered me. With that and the money from our steers tomorrow I want to buy you out of the dam. What price will you make me?"

An exclamation sprang from his lips as he scrambled quickly to his feet. Helen also rose. "What! You want—"

He stared in blank, incredulous amazement at her winsome face now wearing an expression the like of which he had never seen before. "Wh-what did you say?" he repeated in an awed, far-away tone. "Take money from him? You want to quit the partnership? To buy me out?"

She nodded, her breast heaving turbulently. "Yes. What price will you make, please?"

His throat was so dry that he could not answer at once. Still he stared, his lower jaw sagging. Link passed a hand over his forehead and frowned. "Why, I won't sell out. Not to anybody!"

Helen Hamilton looked away. "Then will you buy me out? Will you pay me a fair price and dissolve the partnership?"

"Gosh!" he whispered, "I—don't want to! Anyhow, I couldn't raise the money. No, I couldn't do it."

There ensued a brief silence. "How much do I owe for my part so far?"

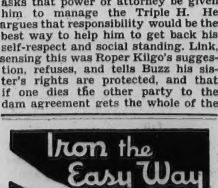

He shifted weight, scarcely crediting his ears. "Nine hundred or so. I dunno"

He had left out the five hundred he had personally borrowed from Banker Otto Pieper, and the five hundred he owed Marty Bush. Also her share of the expense of building the dam which they did not know exactly as yet—McLendon's salary, wages owed, materials not paid for.

Helen realized this. "It must be a great deal more than that. One thousand for half of our first note, four hundred of the eight hundred dollars I lost when Buster Townsend held me up—"

"But he didn't! Say!" As Link advanced a step she retreated, her hands raised as if to fend him off. "Buzz told you that? But, Helen, Buster didn't pull that job! Why, I put it up to him an' he proved an alibi. Buster wouldn't do that—he's the best man I've got.

Little Helps For This Week

"They that know Thy name will put their trust in Thee, for Thou Lord hast not forsaken them that seek Thee. Psalm 9:10.

In Thee I place my trust,
On Thee I calmly rest;
I know Thee good, I know Thee just,
And count Thy choice the best.

The souls that would really be richer in duty in some new position are precisely those who do not borrow excuses from the old one; who ever esteem it full of privileges, rich in occasions of good, frequent in divine appeals, which they chide their graceless and unloving temper for not heeding more. Wretched and barren is the discontent that with its tools instead of with its own skill, and by criticising Providence manages to keep up complacency with its self. How gentle we would be if we were not provoked, how pious if we were not busy, the sick would be patient if he was in health, the obscure would do great things if he were only conspicuous.

THE AWAKENING

(From The Mannville Mirror, reprinted by request)

I once was a chum of the grocer,
But now it is easy to see,
Since I'm an inspector for Manning,
He does not appear friendly to me.

I thought I'd elected a genius
When I marched from the polls last fall,
But now I'm bound down in slavery
By a rich man from old Montreal.

His profession's protecting the big shots
And they know right well where he stands,
He extracts compound interest with pleasure—
He apprenticed in bleak Newfoundland.

Conditions have changed in the classroom,
And spelling is not the old way;
We see the word "co-operation"
Is now spelled exactly "obey."

Five pounds a month we were promised;
The bribe was effective you see.
But I'm so ashamed we accepted—
O bring back my freedom to me.

A hash slinger consented to teach us
(He now sits in Ottawa's hall)
That the fountain pen source of finance
Was really the crux of it all.

An eighth of a ton from Calgary,
Plus bluster, plus Bible, plus gall,
Caused us gopher-fed serfs of the prairie
To swallow hook, sinker anl all.

The men we elected to govern
Can't handle the job, so they say;
So they call in Magor and Douglas
And all we can do is pay!

We are hemmed in by levies and taxes;
The codes are as wormwood and gall.
We blush at our blunders and folly.
And dread where the axe next will fall.

And a new wing is needed at Oliver
(At least so I heard Fallows say)
And a pitying world was aware of it
When the votes were counted that day.
